TOWN TATTLER

Visits Some of the Business Houses and Writes an Interesting Account.

"Hello Guff! what do you think of the Presidential outlook?" said I as I walked into the cozy quarters of Guffly & Ringo, the croqueters at law at 329, East Market Street, one frosty morning last week. "I don't care anything about the election," said he, "I am interested, just now in making a fire," and he shivered and turned up the collar of his overcoat still higher. "I told that office boy to have a fire early and here it is 8:30, no fire and I'm cold enough to freeze saltwater." "Oh! I'm pleasant enough, never mind," said a cheery voice away up about the ceiling and in walked Benjie with a pleasant smile. "Well," said Guffly "it may be warm up there where you are, but it's quite a different atmosphere we other folks are living in down here." Just then the office boy came shivering in full of apologies. I felt that the air had sort of a sulphuric tendency, or soon would have, and I went on down to the little jewelry shop of my old friend, H. Weinsheimer, who ever early as he is, was pleasantly situated at his work, which for years and years in the self same place, he has followed. Such a pleasant fire was burning. I could not resist the temptation to stay awhile and talk. No man in Hartford attends more closely to business than does Mr. Weinsheimer, and did you know that by his continued industry he has amassed quite a little fortune? I'm told it's so. You won't blame me I know, for Capt. is such a magnetic fellow anyway, if I tell you that I soon found myself in the Bank chatting Capt. Cox and his gentle manly clerk, Johnny Moore. Well, there's just where I was. I like to go there, so does every body else. It is so pleasant, the Capt. is so kind and obliging and Johnny, well he is the very fellow some girl is going to miss by not taking him in, and girls, John will do to tie to, first class. Sara and Me are only next door, and of course I dropped in there, I do that every day whether I want to trade or not. The atmosphere is so home like, it's kind of revivifying and ketching. For right here you'll find the inimitable Sara, there's only one—said that the world's not full of them, and no matter how blue you are if you will stay in her presence two minutes and not be in a good humor with your self and every body else, then you may kick me—but not too hard. And Me, yes, you'll find Me here too, and there is only one. Me is a noble fellow, a whole-souled Christian gentleman, the very fellow we all love to call Charley Hamilton. And there's Ruth, not the original Ruth of holy writ, but our own fair lovely Ruth, a new addition to the Bazaar, by the way a very useful and ornamental one she is too. I didn't want to sue for a divorce, for I'm not the possessor of the necessary qualification, neither did I wish to ascertain the legal and historical aspects of primogeniture, marriage or anything else, for of legal lore and matrimonial experience, I neither have nor desire, but I did want to spend a moment or so with my old friends, John Sam and the Judge, so up stairs I went, and into the pleasant law office, where I found Col. Wedding devouring the contents of the latest number of a great law journal, while Judge Glenn with his head up and hat back was reviewing Blackstone, I said, "good morning" as is my custom on meeting people, if it is before dinner, and so did they. We talked pleasantly about matters in general, but when the conversation turned to law, I turned to the door, for most persons think I know a good deal of law and I knew these fellows would undecieve themselves if I carried on a conversation on that subject, so I beat a retreat and saved my reputation. Of course you can guess whom I found next door. Oh! yes, it's that bundle of git up and git, known as J. H. B., Not-Quite-Alphabet, Carson. He was measuring off calico for a customer and I waited to see how his scissors would slip when he cut off the piece, but they didn't slip. He never lets anything slip, but he deliberately set his scissors so as to give his customer a full inch and a half. He always does that for I've seen him measure calico before. You can always depend on Henry, he's square. Wishing there were more Henry Carsons, I reluctantly left, coming to T. J. Morton's. I thought I would like some peanuts, I used to like candy, but I don't now, said, to say it aggravates my teeth, but peanuts are more congenial to my disposition so, "Tom" said I "what will you take for a dime's worth of your best peanuts?" "I don't keep any" but the best of anything," said Tom, "but as it is you I will let you have a dime's worth for ten cents." And I departed feeling pleased with my purchase and the purchaser. Some one told me Mr. Burton wanted to see me at his stable, so I will go down and see him.

On leaving the livery stable, I walked across the street to the big glass front building, where I found the office of the Hartford Republican. In the front room sat Jo. B. Rogers, the wiry young Superintendent and also editor of the REPUBLICAN. He greeted me with a pleasant "good morning," and invited me to have a seat, but I preferred to go back and see the "boys." I found the young foreman, S. A. Anderson, making something on the job press, but didn't understand him, and he looked like he didn't care to be bothered, so I passed on to see Alex Barnett and Allen Anderson manipulate the types, and, oh, how they work, so fast. Leaving the REPUBLICAN office I enter F. W. Yeiser's blacksmith shop, where I find my young friend, C. M. Co's, too busy to talk to me, and I leave him to visit Schampire's shoe store. Everything is in "apple pie" order here. Well, well, I find Dan Tracy on the corner, in the wood-shop, busy with his tools and talking politics. Dan is a jolly good fellow and I hated to leave him, but I had to move on in order to see my old bachelor friend, Dick Williams. I find him busy working at his anvil, assisted by that noble gentleman, Bob Gillespie. Being an old bachelor, Dick and I could talk about our love scrapes when we were boys, and the time flew swiftly by, and I had to leave him. I couldn't afford to pass Field's "bus barn, and in I go. Will Taylor seemed to be glad to see me and invited me into the office to warm. Henry Field was out, I suppose he had gone to Beaver Dam. Feeling that I wanted a smoke, I went in to see my young friend, Marvin Bean, in the drug store on the corner. He was too busy picking on a guitar to talk to me, so I went over to the grocery to see L. B. Bean. He's a comical fellow and had some funny things to say that made me feel much better. Well, I didn't know whether to go up the alley or not, but thinking of another one of my bachelor friends, I am compelled to go on down to the corner and see that jolly old fellow John Thomas. He knows more and says less about it than any man in town, but he's all right. Ellis and Pete were busy in the store and I didn't say much to them. Here I am at C. L. Field's livery stable. Everything is moving along lively. The Squire is helping some of the boys hitch a horse to a buggy. By the way I find Sam Johnson here. He is a horseman from "away back" knows a good horse when he sees him, and is a splendid master. Bro. Bean's undertaking establishment was closed and I supposed he had gone to the country to marry a couple. The meat shop is next; I enter, and find Mr. Ross looking over his books, but failed to see the jovial face of that old fat gentleman, Bill Foreman. Mr. Ross told me he quit there some two or three years ago and was working on his farm. "Hello, Todd," I said, as I went into the Red Front. "Hello, old friend," said he, "I haven't seen you for a long time." He gave me a cigar, and told me I needed a shave, and I strolled into the barbershop. Well, if I didn't find Archie Can? I had not seen Archie for a long time and we had a pleasant talk while he shaved me. He told me he had a young friend up stairs over the Red Front and asked me to go up and see him, I went. Dr. White was his friend. He was busy making teeth and we did not tarry long. His office was a nice one. "Won't you go up to the Commercial and take dinner with me," said Cain? I hated to refuse him, so I went. The hotel seemed to have changed hands in the last year. Mr. Stahl was gone and in his stead I found that old war-horse politician, Wm. Milligan. We had a good dinner, and after enjoying a good cigar I started up the street. "Hello, there," somebody said. I stopped and Harry Taylor, that gentlemanly young lawyer, came to the door. A good fire here and I will rest awhile. Harry told me there was a meat shop next door to him, run by a Mr. Her. I did not see him. After spending about an hour with Harry I started out to see the rest of the town. As I had been down on the lower street, I thought I would go on farther up. I looked in at Klein's grocery, but did not know any of them, so I wound in to see Mr. Warner, the shoe man. He was half-soiling a shoe, and I did not say much to him. Griffin Bros' drug store used to be a favorite resort of mine and I believe I will see them, thought I, and in I go. I find Henry filling a prescription and Larkin talking to Dr. Baird about some medicine. I was treated awful nice in here, but couldn't remain long. Outside I happened to look up and saw a sign which said, "Hartford Herald." Well, I'll go up and see the "boys." "Come in," said that old bachelor friend of mine, Ben Ringo. "Well, what about that fire you and Guff were kicking about this morning," said I. It's all 'o k," said Ben. Mr. Felix was busy writing. Hearing a noise in the other room, I found the foreman, Mr. Matthews "making up" the form, he said. I hardly recognized Will Schampire, but he was just as obliging as he used to be. A young fellow by the name of Vaught, who seemed awful pleasant. The "boys" are a jolly set; I staid longer than I expected. On leaving the Herald office I found a new firm located on the corner, style Hoover & Ashley. They told me they were doing a good business and I went out into the cold again.

Well, well, Handy Corner next. J. H. James is the obliging popular proprietor of this store on the corner, and a jolly gentleman he is. Klein's hardware store being on his way, I will see if he has anything I want, so in I go to investigate. I find that "Prince of good-fellows," Bob Crowe, who is always so entertaining, but seemed more so than common this evening. He gave me a cordial welcome, presented me with one of my favorite cigars, sold a customer a barrel of flour, and talked all the time. The mammoth dry goods house of Fair Bros. & Co., was directly on my way, so I will stop in and see them. Mr. Fair, a very gentlemanly old man, greeted me at the door and invited me in to examine their mammoth stock. Will and Mac were busy waiting on customers, and giving bargains. I never saw the like. In measuring calico, I noticed that Will would invariably let the scissors slip and give the customer about four inches more than he really bought. Mac was selling a customer a fine suit of clothes for less than I thought it could possibly be sold for. Their Millinery Department was upstairs, presided over by the accomplished and beautiful, Miss Helen Foster, who is always up to the latest styles in hats and all kinds of notions. Miss A. B. Lewis & Co's, Millinery store is still on the corner and doing a good business. In former years I could have visited the Court House to procure a license, but the sun of many summers has dimmed my brow and the winds of many winters have shattered my limbs, that has all been forgotten, and I can now only visit that place to see what is going on in the Temple of Justice. On my left as I enter, I find the County Clerk's Office, and that whole-souled fellow, Rowan Holbrook, as Clerk. He was busy looking over some papers, while his obliging deputy, L. P. Looney, was filling out a marriage license. Just across the hall, I find the Circuit Clerk's Office, that "old reliable" young Clerk, W. G. Hardwick. "Billy" as he is better known, preparing for Circuit Court, which, by the way is no small job, but "Billy" is ably assisted by his brother, C. L. Hardwick and A. T. Hall and no fears are entertained but what every thing will be in shape by the time Circuit Court convenes.

How to Measure Hay.

(Field and Farm.)

The hay crops—or rather crops—have been gathered in Colorado for this year, and needless to say they have been large ones. But the cutting, curing and stacking of hay are not all that the farmer has to do with this product. He generally has to sell some of it, and in order to do this properly he has to know how to measure it. When a large quantity of hay is sold by one farmer to another the quantity is usually determined by measurement. Sellers are disposed to insist that a cubic foot of hay is a ton. This is entirely too small and will not weigh out. How many cubic feet will make a ton depends on so many conditions that no certain rule can be given. It depends on the kind of hay whether timothy, alfalfa or prairie, on the character of the hay, whether fine or coarse, on the condition in which it was put in the stack, and particularly on the size, especially the depth of the stack or mow.

In a very large mow, well settled, 400 cubic feet of alfalfa or timothy may average a ton, but on top of the mow, or in a small stack, it requires 500 to 512 cubic feet; sometimes even more. It is not safe for the buyer to figure on less than 500 cubic feet; but in a well filled mow, in selling we would rather weigh than sell at that measurement. To find the number of tons in a barn mow or hay shed, multiply the length, depth and breadth together and divide by the number of cubic you think, considering the quality of hay and the condition in which it was put up, will make a ton. To measure a coneshaped stack find the area of the base by multiplying the square of the circumference in feet by the decimal .07958 and multiply the product thus obtained by one-third of the height in feet, and then divide as before, cutting off five right-hand figures. The correctness of this will depend somewhat upon the approximation of the stack to regular a cone, and if the stack bulges out it make the product too small.

The better way is to estimate the area of the stack up to the point of tapering in, and then apply the above rule to the cone shaped top. The best way, however, is to weigh. The experience of weighing a few stacks will enable any one to judge quite accurately. Another approximate rule for measuring a round stack is this: Select a place which is as near as possible to what the average size would be if the stack were of uniform diameter from the ground to the top point. Measure around this to get the circumference. Add four eighths (.0000) to the circumference at the right and divide the whole by 3.1459 to get the diameter. Now multiply half of the diameter by half of the circumference and you have the feet in the circular area. Multiply by the number of feet the stack is high, and you will have the solid or cubic feet in the whole. Then divide by 500 to 512, according to its size and compactness. Which will give the number of tons in the stack.

The Nation's Growth.

(N. Y. Tribune.)

The splendid celebrations which commemorate the achievements of Columbus are appropriately accompanied with most interesting disclosures regarding the wonderful growth of the New World. The progress of United States in industries and wealth is indeed the wonder of the world, and the census bulletins which have been appearing within the last week give a clearer conception of that progress than it has been possible to form from statements previously published. It has been known that the Nation has grown to number 65,000,000 inhabitants, and that in consumption of products these surpass any population of 120,000,000 in any other land on earth. It has been known that the addition to the Nation's wealth during the last decade alone was greater than the aggregate of wealth in 1860, so that a single decade added more than all the wealth created during the centuries which has elapsed since the discovery by Columbus. But the sources of that wealth creation have never been fore been made as clear as within the last week.

The Census Bureau has published bulletins giving statements of manufacturers in twenty-three cities, embracing many of the more important manufacturing cities of the country. New York leads the list with an annual production of $763,832,923; while the number of hands employed is 351,757 in this city. Chicago ranks next with a production of $632,184,140, though only 203,108 hands are employed. Philadelphia employs 253,073 hands, and the annual production is reported as $564,323,762. Boston employs 90,198 hands, and their annual production is $208,104,683. In these four cities the annual product exceeds $2,700,000,000, and in nineteen others, of which Cleveland, Buffalo, Newark, Milwaukee, Providence and Rochester are the most important, the aggregate annual product is raised to more than $3,000,000,000 in the twenty-three cities.

In 1880 the aggregate annual product of manufactures in the whole country was about $5,300,000,000, and the twenty-three cities contributed only $1,600,000,000 of that sum—less than a third. The increase in annual production in these cities has been 87 per cent. in the single decade. It is hardly to be expected that so vast an increase will appear in the minor towns or the rural districts, though the multiplication of manufacturing centres and hives of industry has been the most remarkable feature of the last decade. The return already made it probable, however, that the increase in annual production will exceed 50 per cent. for the whole country, and the aggregate production yearly by manufacturing will exceed $8,000,000,000 for the year 1890.

The output in only twenty-three cities is the result of the labor of 1,306,546 hands, while in the same cities the number of hands employed in 1880 was about 757,000. But there remain to be reported the products of other workers numbering many millions. Economists and eloquent orators who have been speaking with enthusiasm of the Nation's greatness have been accustomed to calculate that its yearly increase of wealth was about equal to that of Great Britain, Germany, and France combined, but the recent figures indicate that this has been a too modest estimate. The annual product of this country, instead of being about $10,000,000,000 as may have reckoned, must be much greater when all industries are taken into account.

In one sense the New World owes much to Columbus. But the magnificent development of the United States has been due, first and mainly, to the free institutions which have brought to this country the most enterprising and worthy emigrants from other lands for more than a century, and secondly to the National policy which has been maintained during the last thirty years by the party now in power. For it is within the last thirty years that the Nation has gained more than three-quarters of its present wealth, and power of wealth production. These are facts which may well excite pride in the bosom of every true American. They may also suggest to every true American the question whether the policy which has realized such grand results ought to be abandoned.

Some fancy the charms of the lily-white maid,
Of ethereal form and languishing eye,
Who faints in the sunshine and droops in the shade,
And is always just ready to die.

But give me the girl of the sunshiny face,
The blood in whose veins courses healthy and free,
With the vigor of youth in her movements of grace,
Oh, that is the maiden for me!

She is the girl to tie to for life.

Hartford Republican

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY MORNING.

JO. B. ROGERS, Editor and Proprietor.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1892.

THE Republicans are not in it.

We have met the enemy and we are theirs.

How would Bob Lincoln do for President in 1907?

ELLIS is elected in the Second Congressional District.

THEY whipped us this time, but they can't do it next time.

IT will now be in order for the Democracy to "destroy the last vestige" of protection.

HENRY WATTESON'S prophecy was all right, but he proved to be a devil of a poor prophet.

THE gallant Gus Willson was defeated for Congress in the Fifth District by a large majority.

THE occupation of the old time Democratic bumper is gone—the Australian Ballot System has knocked it out.

ALL honor is due the Republican party for its bold stand in favor of the New Constitution, which provided for the Australian Ballot System.

THERE was less drunkenness and disorder in Hartford Tuesday than at any other election in years past. Hurrah, for the ballot system.

WITHOUT revolution and without bloodshed, the nation decided Tuesday that there was a change and the change will take place on March 4th next.

THE election Tuesday was the calmest affair you ever saw to be called an election. It looked like a social gathering, rather than a political contest.

ELLA ELLIOT, a young girl of New Albany, Ind., was run over and horribly mangled by a train on the streets of that city Sunday morning and died in an hour.

THERE was nothing with which to float the "float" Tuesday. No uneasy politician dogged his footsteps; no "hustler" administered to his vanity. He was sad, lonely and dry.

WHILE the Democrats are enjoying their victory, let them think of '88 and they'll at once know how to sympathize with us fellows, who are so distinctly not "in it" at this writing.

THE Democrats of Ohio county will ratify the election of Cleveland at Hartford, Friday night, November 18th. People of all parties are invited to be present and take part in the fun.

GEORGE CHARLES SPENCER CHURCHILL, Duke of Marlborough, was found dead in his bed Wednesday morning in Blenheim Castle, Woodstock, England. His son, the Marquis of Blandford, will accede to his title and estate.

LOOK out for the Democratic scramble for the offices. We learn there are already about a dozen applicants for the post-office here, and of course there will be others. There will be just about on an average a dozen applicants for every place to be filled, and then the fun begins.

THE Democrats are claiming Butler county by several hundred majority. Now, right here we propose to draw the line. We have made arrangements to stand it for New York, Kansas, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois to go against us, but when Democracy sets her unholy foot upon the neck of dear old Butler, we think it is time to call a halt. We consider this the most unkindest cut of all.

THE Australian Ballot System was thoroughly tested Tuesday in Kentucky, and it comes out with emphatic approval from the people. A few ballots were thrown out from some failure or other on the part of the voter, but as a whole it has proven satisfactory. Another election will thoroughly acquaint the people with the system and will add much to the possibility and probability of fair elections.

THE happiest man in all Louisville Wednesday morning after the election returns were in, insuring the election of Cleveland, was our own John C. Riley. He was the Captain of a company of enthusiastic Democrats about one hundred strong, who were parading the streets, yelling themselves hoarse for their favorite. He marched at the head of the column with his hat hoisted high in the air on his cane and presented a most striking appearance.

THE battle is fought and Democracy is triumphant. We bow to the will of the people, as expressed at the polls Tuesday, without complaint, and we go out of the fight feeling that what could be honorably done to forward the Republican cause we have done, and knowing the justice of the cause we have no apologies to offer. Our fight has been clean, fair and honorable and we go out as we came in, accompanied by our self-respect, bearing malice toward none, but kindness toward all.

SOME of our contemporaries have felt called upon to republish and to criticize what purported to be an advertisement appearing in the REPUBLICAN week before last. Now, it is only necessary for us to say that this was brought into the office, set up, put into the form and run into the paper in the absence of the editor and was not detected until it was too late. There is no one who feels any higher respect for the memory of the honored dead than does the editor of this paper, and no one would be farther from, knowingly committing a breach of good taste, and we can but esteem these criticisms and the effort to give them publicity on the part of our brethren of the press as being, to say the least, unkind.

POOR HENRI.

Watteason stock has been steadily falling for the last three days and is now away down below par. Here's what Henri said last May about the election of Mr. Cleveland:

"WASHINGTON, May 8.—The Democrats, on the other hand, are away out at sea. No one believes the election of Mr. Cleveland possible, yet all are afraid of the defeated ex-President's show of strength in States wholly Democratic or hopelessly Republican. It may be that the great Democratic party stands in need of additional discipline at the hands of that God of whom it has been written that 'whom He loveth He chasteneth.' If so, so be it! But it does seem to me that a little sober reflection, and the sensible putting this and that together, would save us a world of needless wandering through the wilderness of doubt and disaster."

"WASHINGTON, May 11.—The New York World this morning publishes the following note from Mr. Watteason:

"In the present instance I am, as usual, opposing the predictions of a great majority of my political comrades, who favor the nomination of Mr. Cleveland. I do not think that Mr. Cleveland can secure the electoral vote of the State of New York, and, therefore, as that vote is indispensable to his election, that he can't be elected. I do not think that any issue is exclusively represented by him which makes his nomination a matter of duty and honor. Hence, I have urged, am urging and shall continue to urge, until the question is settled by the Chicago Convention, the selection of some Democrat not identified with the factions in the Empire State. I have been, and I am a friend, not an enemy, of Mr. Cleveland, who, in my judgment, will make a grievous mistake if he allows his great name and fame to take the hazards of another candidacy."

Forbearance Ceased.

(Indianapolis Journal.)

"See here," yelled the wrathful man, as he took off his hat and showed a head as bald as a campaign lie.

"Yes, I see," said the druggist.

"Did you ever try my unparalleled capillary renovator?"

"That's just what I did," answered the bald-headed man, in tones of wrath "and here's the result."

The druggist mused a moment.

"It works that way sometimes," he said.

"The hair grows so fast, you see, that it pulls itself out by the roots. Now, if you will only strengthen your scalp by using a few bottles of my acmeical scalp balm—"

At this point they clicked.

A Fatal Fall.

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 7.—The trestle spanning a forty-foot ravine at Honeybrook broke to day, precipitating to the bottom ten loaded cars and six men. At noon the men were on the way to their dinner on a train, and while crossing the trestle the timbers gave way, precipitating the train and men to the bottom. The loud noise made by the cracking timbers and tumbling miners attracted the attention of other workmen, who rushed to the scene. A horrible sight met their gaze as they peered into the yawning abyss. Nearly fifty feet below the surface could be seen a heap of debris, with legs arms, and other parts of human victims protruding. Willing hands rushed to the assistance of the unfortunate men. Michael Kardo was first uncovered. He met a terrible fate. Every bone in his body was broken and his face was crushed beyond recognition. The following were taken out alive: Giuseppe Costelin, foreman, both legs broken and body badly bruised; Andrew Hoxicas, skull cracked and face cut; Michael Regattessa, fractured skull, and arms and body crushed; will die; Vudanni Costefa, cut and bruised, injured internally; John Jodha, arm broken and back injured; John Baraska, chest crushed and four ribs broken will die. All were removed to the hospital.

Found Dead in a Saloon.

Martin C. Cannons was found dead in a saloon at Lexington Monday morning, belonging to John Sullivan, on Vine Street. The dead man was about 35 years old, and lived four miles from the city on the Nicholasville pike. Cannons was in the saloon drunk yesterday evening and Sullivan locked him in a back room and went away. The verdict of the Coroner's jury was to the effect that he died from hemorrhage and exposure.

Old winter has scored his first home run.

We are unable to give any other vote save that Owen, Montgomery, Cleveland and Rowe, carried the county. The latter by a majority of 133.

SULPHUR SPRINGS.

Nov. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Tompkins left Sunday for their home in Owensboro, after a pleasant visit to Mrs. Morton.

The young people had quite a pleasant social Saturday night, at the residence of Mr. Oscar Hines.

Miss Leta Ragland, of Rosine, spent Monday with Mrs. Maggie Martin.

The spelling-match at the school-house last Friday, was very exciting to the contestants. It resulted in a signal victory for Capt. Bedford Bean. Those on the other side say it can't be done again.

Mr. Henry Hardwick, of Hartford, was in our town Monday.

Mr. Will T. Bean, who has been quite ill for some time, is improving.

Mr. T. T. Duff visited Horton Saturday and Sunday.

The school is progressing nicely. The teacher is very proud of the advancement made by some of her students. The honor roll for the October examination is as follows:

Pearl Renfrow 97, Belle Morton 93,

Eva Hines 97, Effie Bean 98, Myrtle Hines 97, Pearl Cannon 97, Mattie Foreman 97, Edna Aull 91, Julia King 90, Willie Midkiff 96, Karl Bean 95, Roy Arment 97, Adolphus Johnston 98, Robert Fielden 98, Noah Dye 99, Mc. Bean 90, Mattie Bean 90, Bedford Bean 93, Cooke Bean 97, Dresden Bean 95, Martine Bennett 97, Mary Bennett 95.

The attendance during the bad weather has been remarkably good, and the people deserve great credit for their interest in school matters.

To-morrow is the "eventful day" that decides the fate of Harrison and Cleveland. This place is agog with excitement already, and the greatest of interest is taken by all parties.

A Good Word for Fast Horses.

I do not believe in slow driving. There is no more virtue in driving slow than in driving fast, any more than a freight train going ten miles an hour is better than an express train going fifty. There is a delusion abroad in the world that a thing must necessarily be good and Christian if it is slow and dull and plodding. There are very good people who seem to imagine it is humbly pious to drive a spavined, galloped, glandered, spring halted, blind, staggered jade. There is not so much virtue in a Rosinante as there is in a Bucephalus. At the race some people drive, Elijah, with his horses of fire, would have taken three weeks to get to heaven.

We want swifter horses and swifter men and swifter enterprises, and the church of God needs to get off its jog trot. Quick tempests, quick lightnings, quick streams, why not quick horses! In time of war the cavalry service does the most execution, and as the battles of the world are probably not all past our Christian patriotism demands that we be interested in equinal velocity. We might as well have poorer guns in our arsenals and clumsier ships in our navy yards than other nations as to have under our cavalry saddles and before our artillery slower horses.—T. De Witt Talmage in Ladies' Home Journal.

Why He Was Saluted.

Now and then American papers have a paragraph to the effect that Henry James, the writer, is proud because he looks like the Prince of Wales. This is wrong. It is the other way about. The hauteur of the prince is due to the fact that he knows he looks like Henry James.

The other day Henry James was passing the house of parliament when the soldier on guard presented arms. Mr. James looked about him to see who the salute was for, but he noticed there was nobody near him.

After walking on a bit he turned and passed the sentry again. Once more the soldier presented arms. Mr. James turned to him and said:

"Is that salute meant for me?"

"Yes, your royal highness," answered the soldier.—London Cor. De-troit Free Press.

Trade at the Bazaar.

Prof. Alex Foster, of Lufkin, Texas, writes to his brother, Richard, as follows: "I have very sad news to chronicle. On last Friday, the 4th inst., at noon just after I had eaten my dinner and got back up to my college two of the boys fell out and one shot the other dead. Shot him twice. He came very nearly shooting me as I got to him about the time he made the shot."

Lee Nelson, son of F. E. Nelson, living East of town, fell from a tree while gathering nuts in the bottoms last Sunday and received injuries, which will likely prove fatal. He and his two brothers were together, and he concluded to climb a tree to shake the nuts down, and a limb, on which he was standing, gave way and he fell to the ground, a distance of about 40 feet. He was immediately picked up and carried home, and at last account was doing as well as could be expected.

The Mammoth's Excursion.

The great Mammoth Shoe and Clothing House of Kleinman & Simonson, Louisville, will give an excursion to-morrow to that city. The occasion is the evening matinee of the Lillian Russell Opera Company, at the Auditorium in the great play "La Cigale."

A Return Reception.

The young gentlemen of Hartford, ever awake to the social enjoyment of the fairer sex, have arranged for a grand Return Reception, given to the young ladies, and it promises to be a nice affair. Games of all kinds will be played, and refreshments will be served at about 10 o'clock. It will be remembered that last January the young ladies gave an entertainment and this is to show how the young men appreciated their hospitality. Committees have been appointed, and the committee on invitation has invited the following named young ladies and gentlemen and they have accepted: Misses Lizzie Chappeze, Elva Morton, Ella Cox, Carrie Woerner, Rachie Sanderfur, Flora Ross, Ella Herring, Verda Duke, Anna Bean, Fannie Casebier, Mary Nall, Stella Thomas, Maggie Nall, Mattie Sanderfur, Katie Coombes, Susie Yeiser, Lula Walker, Lida Walker, Jessie Ford, Hennie Gunther, Ida Duke, Maggie Gunther, Eva Morton, Birdie Nall, Helen Foster, Tula Pondleton, Nelson, Emma Fair, Sara Collins, Ruth Coombes, Lula Johnson, and Messrs. T. J. Morton, J. A. Smith, J. J. McHenry, M. Bean, J. H. B. Carson, W. M. Fair, O. J. Thomas, Jno. B. Wilson, J. S. R. Wedding, Jno. T. Moore, R. E. Lee Simmerman, S. A. Anderson, J. H. White, J. H. Williams, J. R. Williams, R. Foster, C. L. Hardwick, W. F. Schapmire, Bob Walker, Randall Collins, John Vaught, S. C. Taylor, Sam Casebier, Gilbert Westerfield, U. S. Carson.

The Louisville Post has this to say of our contemplated organization of a lodge of Knight of Pythias: "Hartford, Ohio county, Ky., has applied for a charter with seventy-five names on the list. As Hartford is a lively town the new lodge will no doubt be a lively one."

A Serious Cutting Affray.

A serious and probably fatal difficulty occurred at Hardinsburg, Ky., Monday between ex-Representative Tice Jolly and W. W. Vessels, proprietor of the Pambleton House. It occurred in Vessels' saloon. Jolly, who has always been a Democrat, for personal reasons, would not support the ticket for Sheriff. Vessels is a very active politician in the Democratic party, and was talking to Jolly about the county race. Both parties became enraged, Jolly using his knife very effectively on Vessels, stabbing him in the face and abdomen. He was carried to his home, across the street. He is now resting easy, and thought not fatally cut. Vessels was United States Guager under Collector Cox.

The following young people spent last Saturday in the woods, gathering nuts and otherwise enjoying themselves: Harry Roberts and Miss Ella Cox, Sam Anderson and Miss Elva Morton, Gip Westerfield and Miss Lula Johnson, Silas Griffin and Miss Ona Westerfield, W. A. Stewart and Miss Ella Herring, Earnest Tracy and Miss Carrie Woerner. They report a very pleasant time, and the boys are indebted to the young ladies for a nice dinner that was prepared.

NOTICE.

The undersigned guardian of Martha, Harvy, Gussie and Willie Kelly, will on Saturday, Nov. 19, 1892, at the late residence of H. P. B. Kelly, in Ohio county, two miles Southwest of Beaver Dam, on the Morgantown road, expose to sale by public out-cry to the highest and best bidder all the personal estate set forth to said children by the appraisers of the estate of said Kelly, deceased, consisting of horses, cattle, hogs, poultry, wagons and farm implements, household and kitchen furniture. Also a field of corn; the farm on which said Kelly resided will be rented for one year. Terms made known on day of sale.
